Teaching Experience

As a full time professor at the University of Milan-Bicocca, I have been teaching approximately 120 hours each academic years starting in 2002 until 2016. As a part-time professor, I have teaching approximately 60 hours each academic years starting 2016 until now. My classes at the University of Milan-Bicocca in the last ten years included:

Philosophy of language
Applied psycholinguistics
Structure of natural languages
Language and cognition

The complete list of the classes I taught together with the anonymous evaluation of my classes by the students who attended them is available at the following link of the university Bicocca website:
https://opinionistudenti.unimib.it/valdid/
(University of Milan-Bicocca has been publishing the evaluations by the students since the academic year 2015-2016)

My evaluation was consistently above the mean and the median of my department and always above 8 in a scale from 1 to 10.

In addition to my teaching duties at Milan-Bicocca, I have teaching in various institutions, including Paris 8 University ('Different approaches to linguistic data'), UCLA ('Syntax of Romance languages' and 'Syntax of Latin'), University of Geneva (Advanced Syntax, Sign Language Linguistics and Language Evolution) as well as in many summer schools.
